Relying on Christ's own words, the Catholic Church has always held that the bread and wine brought to the priest in the offertory procession are changed into Christ's body and blood "by the action of Christ and the power of the Holy Spirit" when, at the consecration of the Mass, an ordained priest says over them the words Jesus said: "This is my body.... This is my blood."

Confiar en las propias palabras del mismo Cristo, la Iglesia Católica siempre a sosteniendo que el pan y el vino llevados al sacerdote durante la procesion del ofertorio se transforman en el cuerpo y la Sangre de Cristo por la accion de Jesus Cristo y el poder del Espiritu santo, cuando el sacerdote durante la consagracion pronuncia las palabras del miso Cristo "Este es me cuerpo ...Esta es mi sangre.

St. Martin de Porres Patron Saint of Public Health Workers and

Martin de Porres was born in 1579 in Lima, Peru when it was a Spanish province. He was the son of a freed slave and a Spanish nobleman. Under Peruvian law at the time, Martin faced many challenges since he was mixed-race. He became a lay Dominican brother (Third Order) and lived a life of prayer and service to the poor. Martin was known for many miracles, including his ability to levitate and bi-locate. He was also known for his work curing the sick, including during multiple epidemics in Lima. Throughout his life, Martin faced constant obstacles because of his mixed-race heritage, but he worked constantly for harmony in his community and others facing his situation. He is the patron saint of all those seeking racial harmony. "I only cure you. It is God who heals you." -St. Martin de Porres

The Teaching of praying for the Dead

"All who die in God's grace and friendship, but still imperfectly purified, are indeed assured of their eternal salvation; but after death they undergo purification, so as to achieve the holiness necessary to enter the joy of heaven."

Catechism of the Catholic Church 1030

A Protestant friend says that the Bible contains no references to purgatory. What is the basis for the Church's teaching about this? Why do Catholics pray for the dead?

In 2 Maccabees 12:38-46, Judas Maccabee orders that sacrifices be offered in the Temple in Jerusalem for slain Jewish soldiers who had worn pagan amulets (good-luck charms).

Some people have seen this story as biblical justification for the teaching on purgatory. That certainly overstates the author's intention. If, however, those Jewish soldiers did something wrong by wearing pagan amulets, why offer sacrifices on their behalf?

The two Books of Maccabees are probably not in your friend's Bible because they were originally written in Greek. During Jesus' lifetime, some Jewish people regarded these books as inspired by God.

About 60 years after Jesus' death, however, rabbis at Jamnia in Palestine drew up the list (canon) of the Scriptures used by Jewish people to this day. That shorter list includes only works composed in Hebrew, excluding the two Books of Maccabees, five other books and parts of the Books of Daniel and Esther.

For centuries, Eastern and Western Christians accepted as inspired the longer list. When Martin Luther translated the Bible, he used the shorter list. Sometimes, these seven books are printed in Protestant Bibles as "Deutero-canonical" or "Apocrypha." The New Testament and early Christian writings offer some evidence for purgatory. In 2 Timothy 1:18, St. Paul prays for Onesiphorus, who has died. The earliest mention of prayers for the dead in public Christian worship is by the writer Tertullian in 211 A.D. The question of purgatory and praying for the dead was a major issue between Catholics and Protestants in the 16th century. The Council of Trent's 1563 decree about purgatory reaffirmed its existence and the usefulness of prayers for the deceased, yet it cautioned against "a certain kind of curiosity or superstition..." about it. The Roman Catholic teaching on purgatory reflects its understanding of the communion of saints. We are connected to the saints in heaven, the saints-in-waiting in purgatory and other believers here on earth. Prayers for the deceased are not a means of buying their way out of purgatory.
